John Hancock School Celebrity Alert!

If you watched the Super Bowl on Sunday, you know what a tough loss it was for our Philadelphia Eagles. However, if you didn’t already know, Hancock’s very own Justina Miles was one of the ASL performers at the Super Bowl. She interpreted, in American Sign Language, the pregame performance “Lift Every Voice and Sing” and Rihanna’s halftime performance.

Justina was raised in Philadelphia and was a student at John Hancock as part of the Deaf/Hard of Hearing program. She is the first deaf Black woman to interpret during the Super Bowl. She has also competed in the 2021-2022 Deaflympics, winning a silver medal in the US women’s track relay competition. Justina is currently a student at Bowie State University in Maryland.
“Lift Every Voice and Sing”
Super Bowl vocal performance by Sheryl Lee Ralph

ASL performance by Justina Miles
Rihanna
Super Bowl Halftime vocal performance
ASL performance by Justina Miles